Brandes,2018-07-23 Master s Thesis from the year 2017 in the subject Economics Other grade 1 7 <http://www.uni-jena.de/language/English/abstract> Many developing countries do not only suffer from weak institutions poor economic performance and corruption but also from separatist movements and violent civil conflicts The question arises why some countries could achieve economic growth and development while others never experienced considerable economic development and are trapped in a vicious circle of re occurring violent conflicts and economic deterioration Since developing countries tend to be more diverse in terms of ethnicity language and religion and many civil conflicts appear to have an ethnic or religious component diversity is regarded as a main cause of economic and political instability Furthermore many scholars consider higher levels of diversity in the least developed countries to be the crucial factor that leads to inefficient policy decisions and impedes growth and development This master thesis addresses the question how diversity affects economic and political stability and elaborates appropriate parameters which are further used in a composite indicator CI to quantify a country s stability respectively instability The thesis is structured as follows After a review of the literature on the relations between diversity and economic development and civil conflicts in chapter two the historic and environmental conditions under which different ethnic and linguistic groups emerged are described Further the effects of external shocks which shaped ethnic development in the special case of Africa are assessed Chapter four introduces the most common measurements of ethnic linguistic and religious diversity and describes the differences between fractionalisation and polarisation Several studies describing the effects of different aspects of diversity on various economic and political outcomes are discussed This is followed by chapter five which is addressing the causes of instability and civil conflict It is examined how conflict as the major outcome of instability is related to and can be driven by diversity and which roles economic and institutional aspects play in explaining civil conflicts In the subsequent part several indicators which capture different aspects of stability are critically assessed Further parameters and their respective weights towards a new composite indicator of instability are elaborated Subsequently chapter seven concludes      Cultural diversity and economic growth Geraldine

Economic Benefits of Ethnolinguistic Diversity , Birthplace Diversity and Economic Growth Frédéric Docquier,2018

This paper empirically revisits the impact of birthplace diversity on economic growth We use panel data on US states over the 1960-2010 period This rich data set allows us to better deal with endogeneity issues and to conduct a large set of robustness checks Our results suggest that diversity among college educated immigrants positively affects economic growth We provide converging evidence pointing at the existence of skill complementarities between workers trained in different countries These synergies result in better labor market outcomes for native workers and in higher productivity in the R & D sector The gains from diversity are maximized when immigrants originate from economically or culturally distant countries but not both and when they acquired part of their secondary education abroad and their college education in the US Overall a 10% increase in high skilled diversity raises GDP per capita by about 6% On the contrary low skilled diversity has insignificant effects

Immigration, Diversity and Economic Growth Atay Kizilaslan,2006 The literature of immigration has been examined the impacts of immigration on the labor market outcomes consumer goods and the formation of jurisdictions Part of the literature stresses on the policy recommendations on how to deal with immigration in general This thesis aims to add this extant literature by investigating empirically the impact of immigration on the long run growth of a country Specifically the thesis examines the impact of diversity on long run economic growth rate of forty eight states in the United States by using historical data on immigration and income since the second half of 19th century Initial analysis shows that there is a negative relationship between the per capita income growth and immigration using both variables In the further analysis on the other hand the results indicate the positive relationship between the per capita income growth and initial level of immigration

Diversity, Economic Webs, and Growth Philip E. Auerswald,Stuart

Kauffman,José Lobo,2009 In this paper we build upon work by Jacobs 1961 1963 1984 and Glaeser et al 1993 to derive the following hypothesis diversity of economic agents is conducive to innovation and thus to growth We present a simple model of a small open economy existing in a world where prices are fixed exogenously capital in this case knowledge capital specific to the firm is immobile rival and excludable There is no market for the exchange of knowledge capital so persistent quasi rents accrue to firms with better than average productivity We discuss some results pertaining to special cases of the model We then extend the model to allow for external economies and to examine the relationship between economic diversity and growth This leads to a tentative conclusion that may reconcile two distinct views of economic growth the view that diversity of economic activities drives growth and the view that economic specialization drives growth We propose that these two phenomena represent distinct episodes in the evolution of economic systems Ethnic Diversity and Economic Performance

Alberto Alesina, Eliana La Ferrara, 2004 We survey and assess the literature on the positive and negative effects of ethnic diversity on economic policies and outcomes Our focus is on both focus both cities in developed countries the US and villages in developing countries We also consider the endogenous formation of political jurisdictions and we highlight several open issues in need of further research Sustainable Cities, 2009 This book focuses on cities their relationships with each other and the disparities between them Analysing cities as the places where diversity is especially apparent where cultural richness is experienced and where conflicts often erupt it illustrates how cultures and cultural diversity interact with economic growth and development The contributors provide valuable insight into how diverse cities should best be governed and made sustainable and explore the concept of diversity in relation to sustainability Building on segregation assimilation and integration policies the book indicates the need to develop policies that can govern diversity in a dynamic nonlinear and spatio temporal complex way Diversity in Development Jan Joost Teunissen, Age Akkerman, 2005 Diversity, Innovation and Clusters Irène Bernhard, Urban Gråsjö, Charlie Karlsson, 2020-05-29 Increased emphasis on the links between regional diversity and regional knowledge innovation and entrepreneurship highlights the need for a focus on the spatial aspects of these multifaceted dynamic relationships in order to improve our understanding By means of a conceptual approach this timely book illustrates the links between innovation and economic development through the role of space This thought provoking book addresses the questions regarding diversity innovation and clusters that require further investigation and analysis Economic Growth, Innovation, Cultural Diversity, 2003 The Impact of Income Inequality on Product Diversity and Economic Growth Josef Falkinger, Josef Zweimüller, 1993 Resurgent Asia Deepak

Nayyar, 2019-10-17 Gunnar Myrdal published his magnum opus Asian Drama in 1968 to conclude that Asia's development prospects were gloomy Since then contrary to Myrdal's expectations Asia has been transformed beyond recognition the development of nations and living standards of people revolutionized These transformations have been uneven across countries and unequal among people Yet Asia's economic progress in this short timespan has been remarkable and almost unprecedented in history Resurgent Asia provides an analytical narrative of Asia's incredible economic development situated in the wider context of historical political and social factors It also provides an economic analysis of underlying factors that assisted Asia s growth and the critical issues in the process of development Resurgent Asia studies not only the sub regions East Southeast South and West Asia but also the major countries China India South Korea Indonesia Turkey Thailand Philippines Malaysia Singapore Pakistan Bangladesh Vietnam and Sri Lanka which account for more than four fifths of Asia s population and income
